We approach architecture as a medium of spatial therapy, harmonizing form, light, materials, and sequences to shape cognitive and emotional states. Guided by environmental psychology, it explores how spatial perception and sensory stimuli can heal, foster agency, and reconstruct identities. Beyond mere shelter, architecture becomes a vessel for grounding and emotional restoration

People think that architects build houses, concrete, bricks and paint, but that is not the point of architecture. Architecture build people, heal them, support them, and so they by themselves can build their cities stand strong in their communities. It is important to build a sense of community a sense of belonging and find a purpose in life.

Architecture, to us, is a silent force, shaping how we feel, move, and remember. It's the space where people, place, and memory meet. We believe in spaces that speak simply yet profoundly, in designs that listen rather than dominate, allowing ego to serve empathy.

In this work, we do not seek to impose meaning, but to uncover it, "to let the land tell its story... to let the land heal its people".

REEM EL KADRI, IMAN TARHINI, ALI MORAD, GHAYDAA SARAKBI, GHADIR SWAIDAN

Architecture, to us, is a quiet force—where land, memory, and people converge. Whether through healing spaces in virtual realms or resilient structures on fragile ground, we design with empathy, not ego. Our work listens before it speaks, aiming not to impose meaning, but to reveal it—to let the land tell its story, to let architecture mend what was broken, and to become a bridge between belonging, recovery, and hope

YOUSSEF IBRAHIM, WAFABASBOUS, MYA LAHHAM, SHATHA OBEID, MALEK JARDALI

We see architecture as the quiet language through which humans shape the world and are shaped in return. Architecture is more than the act of building, it is the silent language through which humanity shapes its environment and, in turn, is shaped by it. It is the expression of space not through force but through meaning, where the need to connect, shelter, express, and belong finds its tangible form.

Architecture serves as a potent medium to question our prevailing conception of justice, asserting through its very design that accountability is not merely corrective, but a fundamental prerequisite for genuine healing

TEAM 07

CELINE ITANI. FAHED EL BILANI . REEM SAKER . FARAH ZANTOUT . YASMINE BADR

We see architecture as more than just building, it's memory, emotion, and identity woven into space. It lingers in our minds, often resurfacing in moments of nostalgia, tied to places that made us feel something real. Architecture tells stories without needing words; it captures culture, holds onto collective memory, and quietly shapes how we experience the world around us.

TEAM 09

FAROUK AL BAKHOUR. KAMAR ZAIM . MOHAMMAD AL JIBRIL . TALA SANJAR . KARIM OMAR

We see architecture as a quiet rebellion against darkness, not loud or forceful, but quietly powerful.
Our vision is to design spaces that breathe, listen, and hold, where healing begins not with walls, but with belonging, for it is time to heal, not cover wounds.

TEAM 10

HANINE AL HATTAB. FARAH SHAMAS. TALIA MERHI. FATMA IBRAHIM. KAREN HAMZEH

Our design philosophy is based on cultural continuity and emotional connection. Our goals are to respect the past, value nature, and create welcoming, restorative environments. Our work, which is based on empathy and human experience, responds to emotional demands and imagines a sustainable future in which design fosters possibilities, people, and places. We design for the future of people, not only for ourselves, or the future.

TEAM 12

MOUDAD ARIDI. NAGHAM AL HAJJAR . ALI SALEH .NADIA ABDEL SATER . SLEIMAN BOU DIAB

We believe architecture is not merely the act of building, but the very essence through which human existence takes form. It is the silent framework behind every memory, movement, and meaning—an unseen presence that gives shape to how we dwell, connect, and become. Our goal is to create environments that not only function aesthetically but leave a lasting impact on those who move through them.
